

GASHOLDERS
LONDON

King's Cross
A photographic essay

*This is the new world.
A world that begins or ends with trains or Paris.
A world where people live and work, stroll and play, eat and drink or simply create amazing things.
This is the land of the Gasholders.
A land of diversity,
of surprise, of delight.*

Pancras Square

At the heart of King's Cross are the restaurants and cafes, the fountains and trees of Granary Square, all fed by the width and drama of King's Boulevard.

A square and stage that is forever changing, evolving, performing.

Granary Square

Lewis Cubitt Park

Dishoom, Stable Street

The British Library

Central Saint Martins, degree show

This is a world where great books, scripts and scrolls hold hands with art, with fashion, with dance. It is the incubator of the future and the passion of unfettered talent.

Caravan, Granary Square

Grain Store, Granary Square

Vinoteca, King's Boulevard

Living a life rich with fingertips in the future.

The Crossing, in the Granary Complex

*A life of markets and meanderings, of undiscovered parks,
of delightfully revisited pleasures.*

King's Cross Station

*It is an amazing world.
A place brimming with international flavours;
of shops and bustling squares; of concerts and community; a place to potter, a place to enjoy. A place connected by canal, of galleries and gardens, of homes and families – a place to live, a place to love.*
